

Stylized fact in the 1990s: no convergence

Source: Introduction to Modern Economic Growth (2009)

"The hypothesis that poor countries tend to grow faster than rich countries seems to be inconsistent with the cross-country evidence" (Barro 1991)

Divergence, Big Time (Pritchett 1997)

One response: endogenous growth models predicting divergence (Romer 1986)

Another response: conditional convergence, controlling for human capital, policies, institutions (Barro and Sala-i-Martin 1992)
